Tesuque Revolt is a hi-energy Electro-Acoustic/Dance/Latin/Surf duo born while riding waves in San Diego's Pacific Ocean. The band is characterized by a unique stage arrangement where both members stand stage front with contraptions of lights, stands and pedals. They loop guitar riffs and vocal melodies, and trigger samples in an energetic physical delivery that combines catchy songs with a masterful precision of their instruments.

Hailing from the distant lands of Chile and New Mexico, founding members Michael Garcia and Matias Pizarro shared a brief stint in San Diego, then were forced to part ways when Mike returned to his native New Mexico. The music prevailed, and the seasoned musicians continued to rehearse remotely in their studios via cloud-sharing platforms and Skype, and sometimes even sharing melodies and beats over text messages and emails. This mix of electronic and acoustic instruments spawned an innovative way of writing and performing, and their debut material has already caught the ear of listeners across New Mexico, Southern California and Tijuana, Mexico.

Their infectious melodies, catchy hooks and falsetto register evoke latin dance floor hymns. The lyrics are as much about heartbreak as they are about riding waves. In the land of Tesuque Revolt, reggaeton meets rock and Latin-infused urban jungle beats. Check out the band's bilingual release "Serenata de Pirata" and their pulse-pounding performances which make this act one of the most innovative new projects to look out for.
